

How do I setup Wireless Network (eduroam)

Does the University support Wifi?

The University WiFi network, known as eduroam (education roaming), is available campus wide to all students, researchers and staff.

The eduroam wireless network has the added benefit of enabling students, researchers and staff to obtain Internet connectivity across campus and when visiting other participating institutions. To access eduroam all you require is a compatible mobile device (e.g. laptop) and an active Teesside University student, staff or associate account.

If you are a visitor to the University, please ensure that you've registered for eduroam at your own institution first, before you arrive on campus.

For more information and quick connection guides, please visit the eduroam section of the IT Help Centre.
